

A Mother's Journey Through the Maze of Asperger

When my son was first diagnosed with Asperger syndrome, I was lost. I didn't know what it meant, or what to do next. I felt like I was in a maze, with no way out.

But I wasn't going to give up. I was determined to find my way through this maze, and to help my son along the way.

The first step was to learn as much as I could about Asperger syndrome. I read books, articles, and websites. I talked to other parents of children with Asperger syndrome. I went to workshops and conferences.

The more I learned, the more I understood my son. I learned that he was not just a child with a disability. He was a unique individual, with his own strengths and weaknesses.

I also learned that there was no one right way to parent a child with Asperger syndrome. I had to find what worked for my son and me.

There were times when I felt overwhelmed. There were times when I wanted to give up. But I kept going, because I loved my son and I wanted to help him succeed.

Today, my son is a happy and successful young man. He has learned to manage his symptoms and to live a full and productive life.

I am so grateful for the journey that I have been on. It has been a challenging journey, but it has also been a rewarding one.

If you are a parent of a child with Asperger syndrome, I want you to know that you are not alone. There are people who can help you. There are resources available to you.

Don't give up. Keep going. You can find your way through the maze.
