Experience

Vaillencourt has over ten years of experience working in conflict zones. He has worked with a variety of clients, including journalists, filmmakers, and aid organizations. Vaillencourt has a proven track record of success, and he has helped his clients to produce some of the most important reporting on the conflicts in the Middle East.

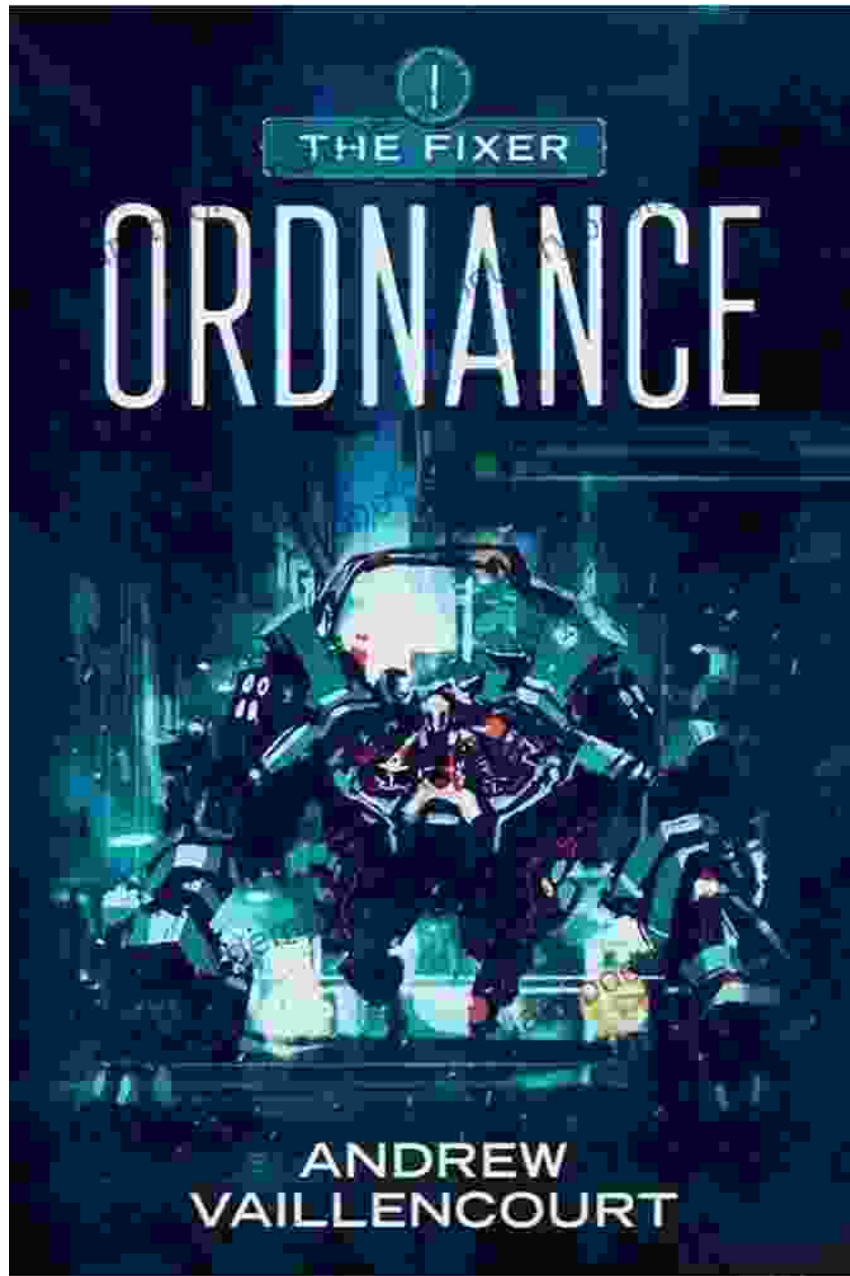

In 2014, Vaillencourt was working as a fixer in Syria when he was kidnapped by ISIS. He was held captive for six months, during which time he was tortured and interrogated. Vaillencourt eventually escaped and made his way back to the United States. His kidnapping was a harrowing experience, but it has only strengthened his resolve to continue his work.

Current Work

Vaillencourt is currently working as a fixer for Ordnance in Iraq. He is helping a team of journalists to produce a documentary about the war in Iraq. Vaillencourt is using his skills and experience to help the journalists to get the access they need to tell the story of the war.

Vaillencourt is a valuable asset to Ordnance and to the journalists and filmmakers who work with him. He is a skilled fixer with a deep understanding of the Middle East. Vaillencourt is also a courageous and compassionate person who is committed to helping others. He is an inspiration to all who know him.

Andrew Vaillencourt is a remarkable man who has dedicated his life to helping others. He is a true fixer, and he has made a real difference in the world.
